

Hypnotherapy for comprehensive development : Vol. 3

Autohypnotherapy (Part 1)

For medical, paramedical, non-medical professionals and non-professionals as well

(Personality, psychopathogenesis & therapeutic process)

(English)

Compiler

Paratpar Guru (Dr) Jayant Balaji Athavale

(Internationally-renowned Hypnotherapist)

('Sainthood' or 'Stage of a Guru' denotes
70% spiritual level, 'Stage of a Sadguru' denotes 80% and 'Stage of a Paratpar Guru' denotes 90% and above.)

Sanatan Sanstha

- ❖ Gift this text to at least 10 relatives & office colleagues !
- ❖ Request libraries, hospitals etc. to keep this Holy text !

Combined index

<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ❖ Sanatan's treasure of Holy texts for emancipation of entire mankind ❖ Preface ❖ Chapters <ul style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Structure and function of the mind 2. Personality and its Development 3. Measurement of Personality Strength and the Ideal Individual 4. Psychopathogenesis and stress tolerance 5. Therapeutic Process 6. The only permanent solution to all problems - Spiritual practice ! ❖ Appendix A <ul style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Autohypnotherapy exercises 2. Heterohypnosis Exercises ❖ Appendix B ❖ Case Reports <ul style="list-style-type: none"> * Electroencephalographic changes during experimental Hypnosis in healthy subjects * Effects of posthypnotic suggestions on learning * An unexpected response in the hypnotic control of Jacksonian seizures ❖ Brief Case Histories - Fear of boss, Failed Affair, Preoperative pain, Impending death, Obsessive fear, Exam phobia 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> 7 8 12 21 78 93 122 214 215 215 217 220 220 224 246 253 258
---	---

After doing research in the field of hypnotherapy for nearly twenty-five years, we felt that the purpose of our endeavours would be fulfilled if we compiled all the knowledge we had acquired in this sphere. This resulted in the 2 Volumes of Autohypnotherapy. These two volumes shall certainly prove to be useful to medical professionals, para-medical professionals, non-medical professionals and non-professionals (all others) as well, as they explain the techniques of hypnotherapy and the methods of formulating suggestions in a simple yet systematic manner.

Here medical professionals include physicians, surgeons, anaesthetists, gynaecologists and obstetricians, dentists, paediatricians, sexologists, psychiatrists, chest specialists, cardiologists, neurologists, dermatologists and venerologists, cancer specialists, plastic surgeons, pathologists, radiologists, dentists etc. Nurses, social workers, occupational therapists, physiotherapists, psychologists and speech therapists are included in the category of para-medical professionals whereas non-medical professionals are those involved in academics, culture, industry, public services, transport, science and technology.

In both volumes we have presented case histories ranging from simple issues such as nail-biting to complex issues such as seizures and hallucinations. These make interesting reading and also help us understand the wide utility spectrum of auto-hypnotherapy.

The 'Personality Defect Model' devised by us is discussed in detail in Volume 1. To facilitate comprehension of the subject we have at the outset discussed the structure and function of the mind and personality. This is followed by a discussion on the mode of onset of a mental disorder. We have mentioned the methods of induction of a hypnotic trance and described the therapeutic process in detail. Towards the end of the volume we have presented how to maintain patient and therapist records.

This volume also includes the study of electroencephalographic changes during experimental hypnosis in healthy subjects and also the effect on learning.

With regards to case histories this volume includes the use of autohypnotherapy to treat fear of boss, emotional upset due to a failed affair, knowledge of major illness or impending death, pre-operative pain, seizures and examination phobia.

In Volume 2 we have also ventured into the paranormal or para-psychological sphere. We have presented cases wherein spiritual hypnosis and hypno-psychic healing were used to treat physical and psychological problems.

If hypnotherapy is practised appropriately based on the principles explained in the two volumes, it will assist in making one's personality healthier and enable one to become happy. Once the personality becomes healthy it is easier to make rapid spiritual progress and achieve an ideal personality by practising Spirituality. Volume 1 includes a separate section regarding the characteristics of an ideal person. In this context it is important understand the importance of Spiritual practice which is the only permanent solution to all problems and development of an ideal personality - Spiritual practice !

 To guide us in this direction we have added a small chapter at the end of the volume. For more details on spiritual practice, our books on the 'Science of Spirituality' will prove handy. We hope this endeavour shall popularise hypnotherapy at the grass root level and also facilitate its development as a super speciality in India as well as abroad.

- Dr Jayant Balaji Athavale

Uniqueness of Sanatan's treasure of Holy texts !

- ❧ Holy texts that teach appropriate sadhana for God-realisation.
- ❧ Eliminate obstacles in sadhana & provide appropriate direction.
- ❧ Scientific answers to 'why and how' in Spirituality.
- ❧ Knowledge provided in scientific terminology (Like charts, percentages) that can be understood by readers of scientific era.
- ❧ Not just theoretical analysis, guidance on practising Spirituality too.

- ❧ Pictures and writings describing the process at the subtle-level of the positive effects of sattvik attire, food etc. on an individual.

Over 67.4 lakh copies of 296 Holy texts in 15 languages

Over 67.4 lakh copies of 296 Sanatan's Holy texts till Jan. 2017 in Marathi, Hindi, English, Gujarati, Tamil, Telugu, Kannada, Malayalam Odia, Bengali, Assamese, Punjabi, Nepali, Serbian & German.

Chapter 1

Structure and function of the mind

Index

1. Physical body and subtle body	12
1A. Five subtle sense organs	12
1B. Mind	12
1C. Intellect	12
1D. Five subtle motor organs	12
1E. Five vital energies (pran)	12
2. Structure of the subconscious mind	13
2A. Identification and interpretation centre	13
2B. Give and take account centre	13
2C. Instinct and desire centre	14
2D. Like and dislike centre	14
2E. Temperamental characteristic centre	14
3. Functions of the mind	15
4. Nature of barrier between conscious and subconscious minds	17
4A. Conscious mind and various centres	17
4B. Impulses coming to the conscious mind	18
4C. Dynamic rather than static	19
4C 1. Overcoming the barrier	19
4C 2. Absence of a barrier	20

Chapter 2

Personality and its development

Index

1. Importance of personality	24
2. Definitions of personality	24
3. Our concept of personality	26
4. Terminologies and classifications of personality by various authors and our terminology	29
5. Characteristic, quality and trait	29
5A. Personality according to the trait theory	29
5B. Advantages of the trait theory	30
5C. Critical evaluation of the trait theory and our answers to them	30
5D. Types of characteristics	30
6. Transient characteristics	31
6A. Importance of a transient characteristic	31
7. Pattern, type, style and factor	32
7A. Personality according to the type theory	33
7B. Types which are within normal limits	33
7B 1. Extrovert	34
7B 2. Introvert	34
7B 3. Type A	34
7B 4. Type B	34
7C. Abnormal personality traits and patterns	34

7D.	Drawbacks of the type theory	35
7D 1.	Incomplete picture of a type	35
7D 2.	Combination of characteristics and types	35
7D 3.	Overlapping of traits of different types	35
7D 4.	Cause and effect - confusion	36
7D 5.	Microscopic vision	36
8.	Personality is not static but dynamic	36
9.	Factors affecting development of personality	38
9A.	Inborn qualities	38
9A 1.	Impressions from previous births	38
9A 2.	Hereditary factors	39
9B.	Modelling	40
9C.	Experience	41
9C 1.	To have an experience	41
9C 2.	Not to have an experience	41
9D.	Intelligence	44
9D 1.	Respondent	45
10.	Our approach to understanding personality	49
11.	Basic and secondary undesirable qualities	50
11A.	Types of defects	51
11B.	Basic and secondary qualities in personality	52
12.	Mode of development of personality, mainly the undesirable temperamental characteristics in mental ill health	53
12A.	Undesirable qualities resulting from anxiety	53

Chapter 2 : Personality and its development	23
12B. Undesirable qualities resulting from thinking about the cause and solution to the anxiety	55
12C. Undesirable qualities resulting from regression and forgetfulness	55
12D. Undesirable qualities developing as defence mechanisms	56
13. Practical understanding of the temperament	58
14. Summary of development of personality in mental health, ill health, super health and the Final Liberation (Moksha)	68
14A. Development of personality in mental health	68
14B. Development of personality in mental ill health	69
15. Motivating force behind development of personality	72
16. Development of personality according to various psychosocial models, theories and the present model	72
16A. Freud's psychoanalytical model	73
16B. Behavioural model	74

Sanatan's Text on 'Ayurveda for a common man'

Fever (Ayurvedic concept)

This book describes how every physician must consider the increased dosha, tissue / organ affected, strength & digestive power of patient, constitution, age, psychological state, season, diet and stage of the disease while prescribing diet and medicines.

Chapter 3

Measurement of personality strength and the ideal individual

Index

1.	Measurement of personality strength	79
1A.	Physical constitution, etc.	81
1B.	Temperamental characteristics	81
1C.	Likes and dislikes	83
1D.	Instincts, desires, etc.	83
1E.	Intelligence, etc.	84
2.	Ideal individual	85
2A.	No fear of action	85
2B.	Chastity, purity and control over various desires and instincts	86
2C.	Co-ordination of the body and mind	87
2D.	Harbouring 'We'-concept instead of the 'I'-concept	87
2E.	No expectation of the result of actions	88
2E 1.	First step - Development of the 'We'-concept	88
2E 2.	Second step - Development of a motherly attitude	88
2F.	Attitude of material detachment	89
2G.	Tolerance, endurance and forgiveness	89
2H.	No fear of death	90
2I.	Penance	91
	2J. Bliss	91

Chapter 4

Psychopathogenesis and stress tolerance

Index

1. Augmentation of stress tolerance	94
2. Evolution of our approach	94
3. Basic and secondary undesirable qualities	95
4. Psychopathogenesis	97
4A. Root cause	100
4B. Predisposing factors	101
4C. Precipitating factors	102
5. Physiological pathways of various behaviour	104
5A. Reactions to abuses in a person with a very defective personality	105
5B. Reactions to abuses in an ideal individual	106
5C. Reactions to abuses in a person with a healthy personality	107
6. Cyclical changes in the psychological condition	108
7. Artesian well phenomenon	109
8. Psychopathogenesis according to various psychosocial models and undesirable qualities in personality	113
9. Psychopathogenesis according to present model and preventive psychiatry	119

Chapter 5

Therapeutic process

Index

1. Requisites for effective psychotherapy	125
1A. Clinic	127
1B. Prior knowledge of the patient	128
1C. When does a patient come for therapy ?	128
2. First therapeutic session	130
2A. Opening phase	131
2A 1. Meeting the patient	131
2A 2. Judging the suitability of a patient for hypnotherapy	132
2A 3. Negotiations and the contract	133
2B. Knowing the patient	135
2B 1. History writing by the patient and/or his relative and history taking	135
2B 2. Questionnaire	136
2B 3. Interview	140
2B 4. Relatives of a patient and the therapist	143
2C. Explaining the meaning of psychological problems to the patient	145
2D. Explaining the causes of psychological problems to the patient	145
2E. Summary	147

Chapter 5 : Therapeutic process	123
2F. Explaining to the patient (and his relatives), the genesis of his psychological problem	148
2F 1. Predisposing factors	148
2F 2. Precipitating factor	148
2F 3. Result	148
2F 4. Symptoms and secondary defects	148
2G. Diagnosis	150
2G 1. Importance of diagnosis	150
2G 2. Limitations of diagnostic categories	150
2H. Aim of therapy	152
2H 1. Patient's aim	152
2H 2. Therapist's aim	152
2H 3. Correction of defects in personality and individuality	155
2I. Explaining to the patient what hypnotherapy is and is not	155
2J. Explaining to the patient the different methods of psychiatric therapy and the difference between them and hypnotherapy	157
2J 1. Psychoanalysis and hypnotherapy	158
2J 2. Psychotherapy and hypnotherapy	159
2J 3. Drugs, electroconvulsive therapy and hypnotherapy	159
2K. Explaining to the patient how to write the daily chart	161
2L. Teaching a patient autohypnosis and its modifications	171
2L 1. Routine method	171

2L 2. Modifications of techniques	172
2L 3. Teaching a patient the principles of formulating correct therapeutic suggestions	173
2M. Hypnotherapy techniques to overcome stress	175
2N. Other techniques	176
2O. Taking care of unfinished business	176
2P. Explaining to the relatives, the role they have to play	177
2Q. Induction of a trance, giving therapeutic suggestions and getting the patient out of the trance	178
2R. Closing phase, i.e. the post-trance discussion	178
2R 1. Ensuring that the patient has followed the suggestions	178
2R 2. Answering questions posed by the patient	179
2R 3. Informing the patient about the next appointment	179
3. Note taking	179
4. Compliance and therapy record	181
5. Management of time	184
6. Subsequent therapeutic sessions	185
7. Autohypnotherapeutic sessions by the patient	188
8. Course of progress as the therapy proceeds	189
9. Termination of/or interruption in therapy	190
10. Role of the interviewer, the therapist	190
11. Follow-ups	192
12. Patient's record	198
13. Therapist's record	207

Chapter 6

The only permanent solution to all problems - Spiritual practice !

In the discussion so far, we have explained how hypnotherapy helps in curing mental illnesses. The examples mentioned ahead will elucidate why hypnotherapy should be supported with daily spiritual practice (meaning, efforts for God-realisation).

A. Root cause of 80% problems in human life is more or less spiritual (such as destiny). These spiritual causes can be overcome by performing spiritual practice such as chanting the Name of a Deity, devotion, service unto the Absolute Truth etc.

B. Spiritual practice imparts the strength to tolerate sorrow, the severity of destiny reduces too. Even if the problem is not overcome with spiritual practice, at least the mind does not remain in a state of sorrow. Further, as we go beyond happiness and unhappiness, unhappiness does not cause any pain ! This is precisely why spiritual practice is the permanent solution on all problems.

If you are already performing spiritual practice, then to understand the next stage of spiritual practice and if you are not performing spiritual practice, then to understand it, read the Holy texts published by Sanatan Sanstha on 'Spiritual practice' ! Also visit website - www.sanatan.org !

For good physical and spiritual health

Sanatan Gomutra-Ark

(Extracted from local cow's urine)

Beneficial for vastushuddhi and vahanshuddhi !

Available in Sanatan's Ashrams and sevakendras